Who should attend the Fire Awareness Training Course?

This course is for everyone within the workplace. If you are an employer, business owner or in control of premises, the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 states that you 'must ensure that your employees are provided with adequate safety training'

This means that it is law to train every member of staff, including any casual staff and ensure that any external companies are also trained in Fire Awareness.

Where Can I attend the Fire Awareness Training Course?

We can deliver 'in house' training at your Business venue and can provide you with a competitive price for group training. We can deliver any of the above courses at your place of work. The 'on site' training option is particularly cost effective for Companies that have several people requiring training at the same time (usually 6 or more people). In addition to this there are many other benefits to arranging a first aid training course 'on site':

- Choosing your own venue gives greater convenience.
- Travelling and accommodation costs can be reduced or removed.
- A greater choice of course types are available.
